

HB 2771 Public Comments:

Pretty Amazing actually. You have a bill to reduce or eliminate the deduction for the interest people pay on their property so you can give money to other home owners. This bill wants to tax people on the taxes they pay for their homes. I can understand that you believe you need additional funds given that you plan to increase spending on illegal aliens, extend tax credits to out of state companies and groups who pay no taxes so they can sell the credits, put the state at risk of losing federal funds due to declaring Oregon a sanctuary state over the objections of many counties in the state, hire an additional 600 and some odd high paid state workers and the beat goes on. It should be embarrassing that anyone would propose paying for these sorts of things by taxing the taxes that you require citizens to pay. If this is not a joke, someone was not thinking straight when they hatched this plot. If this idea passes, I suggest you set aside funding for fighting a citizen referendum or a lawsuit as one or both are pretty sure to occur. This bill hardly warrants a comment and it is understandable that no individual representative wanted his or her name to appear as a sponsor. For those representatives who are as embarrassed to be hearing this bill as most people would be, my apologies.
