This office has reviewed the proposed legislation and determined that it has

Minimal Revenue Impact

Adoption of this bill would prevent the Department of Revenue from considering charitable contributions or activities as a factor when determining the residency of a personal income tax filer. This policy could affect tax determinations in either direction, but the total impact on tax collections is expected to be minimal.