

Mandatory testing of such young children is so discriminatory. It does not consider households, and some obvious disadvantages, depending on Zip Code, many times. The first 5 or 6 years has enormous effects on a child. Given several more years, exposed to other children with a more supportive household, (where they were in preschool and learned to read) ...there is then always a noticeable increase in children's vocabulary, and ability to read.

Please consider those children.

Judith MacDonald

Sent from my iPhone