

I lose faith in the integrity and intention of my elected officials when a state of emergency is called, and there is no emergency. This is playing a political game. I lose faith in the integrity and intentions of my elected officials when they fast track a bill during inclement weather to try and undermine due process. Again this is a political game that my elective officials are playing. The health and wellness and education of my children is not a game to be played with. I lose faith in the integrity and intentions of my elected officials when they claim that we have a choice when in fact they are offering a threat and a blackmail. Either we comply to ANY AND ALL mandatory injections of which the government, in collaboration with disreputable manufacturers on earth, decide upon. I lose faith in the integrity and intentions of my elected officials when I observe them being disrespectful and demeaning in both word and deed, demeanor, and tone towards the citizens who oppose mandatory vaccination. I observe labeling the vaccine injured as "other" and I see their voices being silenced. I lose faith in the integrity and intention of my elected officials when I hear them parroting vaccine rhetoric and propaganda instead of referring to the actual science.

And ultimately I lose faith in the integrity and intentions of my elected officials when I observe them trying to build a society where citizens do not have the right to choose their own medical procedures. Without punishment .

Respectfully,
Kathy Prout
