

Radiofrequency radiation around us has increased 1 quintillion times in the last 10 years. 1 quintillion times. Since the federal government is captured and the telecoms won't stop rolling out their small cells and macrotowers, and many parents can't be trusted to turn the wifi off in their homes at night, it's imperative that we not expose schoolchildren to wifi radiofrequency radiation during school hours. Think about the greater good here – there are over 3000 peer reviewed scientific articles compiled in the 2012 Bioinitiative report that conclusively and definitively show that radiofrequency radiation creates biological harm. The 2018 NTP Study (funded by our own government) definitively and conclusively showed the link between 2G and 3G cell phone radiation to cancer. It's all radiofrequencies folks – and we shouldn't be exposing our children to it. The state has a responsibility to do no harm. I'm afraid the feds are failing here, but the state can do something about it and act in our childrens' best interests. This is all going to circle back in about 15 years – I urge you to be the state that takes action first before this becomes a Secondhand Smoke or Asbestos problem.

Sincerely,
