BACKGROUND:

In 2007, House Bill 3290 established Oregon's community benefit reporting law to document the benefits hospitals provide to communities. Hospitals must report their yearly community benefit costs to the Oregon Health Authority (OHA). Oregon's 60 acute care hospitals are subject to this reporting requirement. However, McKenzie-Willamette Medical Center in Springfield and Willamette Valley Medical Center in McMinnville are for-profit hospitals that do not have an obligation to provide community benefits because they are subject to property and income taxes (OHA 2018).

According to the Legislative Revenue Office (2017), under federal law, to qualify for and maintain tax exempt 501(c)(3) status, including additional requirements placed upon hospitals as part of the Affordable Care Act of 2010 (ACA) hospitals must: (1) establish a written financial assistance policy detailing eligibility for financial assistance, basis for calculating amounts charged, method for applying for financial assistance, and widely publicize policy with service community; (2) develop a written policy requiring the organization to provide, without discrimination, care for emergency medical conditions to individuals regardless of their eligibility under the financial assistance policy; (3) limit amounts charged for emergency or other medically necessary care to individuals eligible for assistance to not more than the amounts generally billed to individuals who have insurance covering such care; (4) make reasonable efforts to determine whether an individual is eligible for assistance prior to engaging in extraordinary collection actions; and (5) conduct a community health needs assessment and adopt an implementation strategy to meet the identified community health needs (LRO 2017).

Oregon law defines community benefits as services, spending or actions taken by a hospital in the community, in exchange for tax-exempt status. There is no defined minimum community benefit a hospital must provide. The types of community benefits may include:

HB 3076 STAFF MEASURE SUMMARY

- costs incurred to train health care professionals;
- unreimbursed Medicare and Medicaid costs, which refers to costs incurred by hospitals that exceed the level of reimbursement provided by Medicare or Medicaid programs;
- charity care, which are costs of providing care to individuals unable to pay for all or part of the services;
- research costs, which are expenses incurred by hospitals related to a research study (e.g. salary and benefits, equipment, facilities, etc.); and
- community health improvements, which are efforts to support local activities or programs that improve community health.

There are several other types of benefits, including subsidized health services, cash and in-kind contributions, public program costs, community building costs and community benefit operation costs.

According to OHA's Office of Health Analytics Community Benefit Report, Oregon hospitals provided $2.2 billion in community benefits in fiscal year 2016, increasing by 14 percent from fiscal year 2015 to 2016, attributed largely to unreimbursed Medicare and Medicaid rates. Unreimbursed costs that hospitals incur in providing critical health services accounts for approximately 83 percent of total community benefit with 73 percent due to unreimbursed Medicare and Medicaid (OHA 2018).

House Bill 3076 requires nonprofit hospitals and health systems to create new or modify existing charity care policies.
