I have been supporting action on climate change for many years and I am anxious to see Oregon take its rightful place as a leader. I have been to Salem twice to lobby on the cap and trade bill and will be there again on Tuesday.

At yesterday's Portland City Club Friday Forum featuring Lynn Peterson, I found out that the bill would affect me personally. When I moved into downtown Portland, I sold my car and now depend on public transit. She said that some of the cap-and-trade funds could be used for making bus transportation more efficient and therefore more reliable, as well as cutting down greenhouse gas emissions from diesel buses idling in traffic.
