“Whereas price controls raise constitutional concerns because they restrict the goal of federal patent law, which is to provide pharmaceutical patent holders with the economic value of exclusivity during the life of a patent; and

“Whereas in the case of Biotechnology Industry Organization v. District of Columbia, 496 F.3d 1362 (Fed. Cir. 2007), the court overturned a District of Columbia law imposing price controls on branded drugs, reasoning that the District of Columbia law at issue conflicted with the underlying objectives of the federal patent framework by undercutting a company’s ability to set prices for its patented products; and

“Whereas current efforts to look at pharmaceutical drug costs are narrowly focused on drug manufacturers and do not take into consideration the cost contributions of other components of the drug supply chain such as distributors, pharmacy benefit managers and insurers; and

“Whereas pharmaceutical manufacturers give rebates and discounts to pharmacy benefit managers and insurers that can lower the cost of medicines by up to 70 percent, yet these rebates and discounts are not often passed through to patients at the pharmacy counter; and

“Whereas nationally three pharmacy benefit managers manage health plans for millions of Americans and control more than 70 percent of the pharmacy benefit manager market nationwide; and

“Whereas nationally more than half of commercially insured patients’ out-of-pocket spending for brand medicines is based on list price due to requirements to fulfill health plan deductibles and the absence of rebate pass-throughs that could help lower costs at the pharmacy counter; and

“Whereas nationally trends in insurer health plan design including higher deductibles and coinsurance have shifted costs to patients such that growth in out-of-pocket spending has outpaced increases in overall health plan costs; and

“Whereas on average patients pay only four percent of costs for hospital stays yet pay 12 percent of costs for prescription drugs; and

“Whereas nationally in the last five years the percentage of commercial health plans that subject prescription drugs to a deductible have doubled; and

“Whereas nationally patients’ out-of-pocket spending on prescription drugs due to health insurance deductibles grew 229 percent between 2005 and 2015; and

“Whereas the Legislative Assembly finds it is in the best interest of the residents of Oregon to ensure drug rebates and discounts are utilized to lower patient out-of-pocket costs at the pharmacy... counter; and

“Whereas the Legislative Assembly directs the Task Force on the Fair Pricing of Prescription Drugs to identify and evaluate strategies that will ensure drug rebates and discounts are passed through to patients in the form of lower out-of-pocket costs at the pharmacy counter; now, therefore,.”.
